Cancer Resources & Advocacy

Are you or a loved one facing a catastrophic illness or injury? Feeling overwhelmed by bills, insurance claims, trying to find the best care resources, all while juggling the needs of your family? Expert help from Cancer Resources & Advocacy can let you focus on what is really important at this trying time.

Joana Ramos created this service as a result of her personal experience with life-threatening illness and her professional background in social services, health care, education, and cultural competency work. After surviving an aggressive form of cancer that did not respond to standard treatments, she left the child welfare field to devote herself exclusively to helping address the many unmet needs of cancer patients and their families, in the USA and around the world.

A graduate of Boston University and the University of Washington School of Social Work, Joana is also trained as a community health educator and a medical interpreter.
